Subject: RE: Potential Google-related Civic Facilities Priorities

I know we're still in a lot of conceptual-phase work, but I'm wondering if certain amenities make sense for a community center so near the googlers. We've talked about the idea of Google working with us to make it a tech hub for learning and teaching our youth (maybe even adult classes in the evenings), and so on. I'm also curious if Google would have certain amenities (on their campus) like a basketball court, swimming pool, gym, preschool/daycare etc. that might serve their workforce. If not, we may want to think about that: for example, if we think daycare/preschool/summer camps would be used by both the neighborhood and the people working at Google, should we consider more space for those activities (or pool, gym, etc) than we might normally design.

Sincerely,

Subject: Potential Google-related Civic Facilities Priorities

I've asked Isela to set a time when we can meet to share ideas about our "public facilities" needs and wants for Google/Diridon.

- I'd like PRNS to share their vision for Google providing a community center in a south Diridon location as part of meeting their PDO/PIO requirement.
- I'd like Jill to share her idea of a Multi-Use Space in the 'urban heart' of central Diridon that could be programmed by the Library for activities related to education, training, learning + book pick-up/drop-off. (this would be an optional 'community benefits' idea that could be prioritized)
- I'd like Kerry/Michael to share any wants they have for public cultural spaces. (this would be an optional 'community benefits' idea that could be prioritized).
- I'd like Jeff to share any wants related to workforce development and local hiring. (this would be an optional 'community benefits' idea that could be prioritized).

The goal would be to sort through the ideas, see if they are complementary or overlapping, and see if we can get to a 'one-voice' priority list for public facilities.

Please help us calendar this interesting and important conversation—I see Sr./Exec staff as the key participants, but feel free to invite any other staff to participate.

I'm going to start by seeing if we can make Tuesday, January 21 sometime between 2:30 and 4:00 work.

Kim
