In going through my emails from the public, I found this one. I never responded as I was waiting for a good time to bring it up, then accidentally lost track of it. She was discussing the issue of stray cats – particularly along the creek and underutilized sites – and how to humanely manage the population, especially as sites are developed and the cats are essentially displaced. I’m not sure who is best suited to look this one, so copying you all. Perhaps Neighborhood Services?

Hi Lori

Hope this finds you well! This is to follow up on the conversation we started at our picnic at Emma Prusch Park about the cats in the area of the future Google development. The issue is still an issue and the capacity to address it is still an ongoing discussion. I hate to see these cats be a collateral damage of the development.

I'm wondering if you might be interested in learning more about the issue from a few folks that are front and center. Perhaps a meeting at The Dancing Cat?

Please let me know.

Thanks for your consideration,

Mary
