Stephen – For visuals:

At www.sanjoseca.gov/GoogleProject you'll find the Plan Set that Google submitted. They are applying for a mixed use development permit that envisions how the lands will be used. There are no architectural renderings at this time. The "Illustrative Core Character" page (about 9 pages down) illustrates a vision of land uses. This will most likely refine through the City's review process during the coming months.

If you have questions about what Google is thinking/planning, reach them at press@google.com

If you have questions about the City's review process for the plan submittal, you'll find info at www.sanjoseca.gov/GoogleProject or contact me and I'll help you or connect you to our Planning team.

Hey Chloe,
We're putting together this package of stories on Who Owns Silicon Valley.
As we mentioned, one of the stories is on the Google project downtown... do you guys have some artist renditions of what the vision for this project is? What it might look like when it's finished?
Could you send them along?
Much thanks for all your help.
